Faith in Public Life Intern

Organizational Mission:

Faith in Public Life is a new and growing organization established by prominent national faith leaders to provide strategic communications and organizing resources to leaders who are working for justice and the common good. This is an opportunity to work with the leading organizations in the field of religion and politics.

Position Description:

Faith in Public Life is looking for interns to provide support to our strategic media and organizing operations. Interns may work between 10 and 20 hours a week (full time internships are also available). Interns may work off site, but at least a few hours in our office in downtown Washington, D.C. is strongly preferred. Start date is flexible, but internship generally runs September through December.

Responsibilities:

- Compile the Daily Faith News Reel (<http://faithinpubliclife.org/news/index.html>) for our website – each day's top news on faith, politics, public policy and public life.
- Conduct research into different segments of the faith community to identify dynamic faith leadership for justice and the common good.
- Contribute content for FPL's website, blog and social networking sites
- Other duties as assigned by FPL staff; interns also have the opportunity to design their own projects as approved and supervised by FPL staff

Job Requirements

- Strong research skills.
- Demonstrated knowledge and awareness of current political and policy issues.
- Strong appetite for news, demonstrated interest in the media.
- Experience or demonstrated interest in working with faith leaders and/or communities.
- Ability to think outside the box about research and communications strategies.
- Commitment to organization's mission and goals.

Job Qualifications

- Undergraduate and graduate students welcome.

Compensation

- Full time interns are paid $150/week and part-time are paid $75/week (based on a 20 hour work week)
